

JK Global Opportunities Fund

April 2021

USD Class +1.91%, GBP Class +1.86%, YEN Class +1.87%, EUR Class +1.67% in April.

The Fund rose +1.91% (USD Class, net of fees) in April, which was driven by a rebound in some of our China A-shares following their weakness in March.

Markets started April on a solid footing, as strong economic data in the US forced analysts to ratchet up their estimates of growth and earnings. Q1 earnings so far (61% reported) are setting new records for the number of companies beating consensus EPS estimates by one standard deviation or more. Notably, 57% of companies have also beat on sales – another record. However, investors are clearly looking through these strong numbers as in normal circumstances such ‘beats’ have typically been associated with outperformance of 110 bps versus the S&P500 the day after reporting, but this quarter that number is just +26bps.

This muted price-action suggests that strong Q1 earnings were largely priced in, and a reminder that markets have discounted a lot of good news in recent months. Therefore, we wouldn't be surprised if markets go through a ‘choppier’ period near-term in the absence of any new catalysts. Having said that, these numbers confirm our view that earnings remain on a solid growth trend, and should therefore be supportive of equity markets on a medium-term view, although we should note that this comes with the caveat of potential margin pressure (more below).

The clear risk to this outlook – which we have rehashed many times before – is a sharp rise in real interest rates compressing valuations. After a brief consolidation in April, inflation breakevens and commodity prices are on the rise again. However, for the time being at least, this is not being accompanied by an increase in nominal rates.

A more recent development, which is somewhat concerning for risk assets, is that we may be seeing early signs of stagflation. We should state that this is not our central forecast (as we expect very robust economic growth) but there is no doubt that inflation indices continue to creep up, whilst recent activity data has come in weaker than expected, namely the ISM manufacturing PMI and non-farm payrolls. This makes some sense to us given the plethora of supply-side issues that the global economy is currently facing. Anecdotes of supply shortages and production cuts (semiconductors, autos) have become commonplace, and we have noticed a sharp uptick in management commentary on this issue across numerous industries. It is still too early to say whether this has become entrenched or not, but it is something we will be monitoring closely over the next few quarters.

With this in mind, we are focussing on owning companies with solid top-line growth, cost control and pricing power, as these will have the best chance of shielding margins and passing on higher costs to consumers. Many of these companies are currently found in the commodity, semiconductor and shipping sectors, where there is a gaping supply/demand imbalance and few signs of that abating anytime soon. We also expect this to be a favourable environment for Commodities/Gold in general, so have been rebuilding positions in miners such as Rio Tinto, BHP and Anglo American.

Blockbuster numbers from the FAANGs have forced us to revisit this group as recent underperformance and valuation compression have made them attractive again. Regulatory pressures seem well discounted and investor 'positioning' looks favourable again. Second line technology stocks in the U.S. and China still look expensive and we have reduced exposures significantly over the last six months. Samsung remains the 'value' buy.

Within equity markets we continue to feel that Japan is being overlooked by investors. Earnings are looking good, and the corporate sector will be a big beneficiary from a strong global economy. The correction in Chinese equities is another area that we are monitoring but feel that the current regulatory focus (targeting the likes of Alibaba, Tencent etc) combined with domestic policy tightening will keep a lid on things for the time being.

JK Global Opportunities Fund is a weekly dealing UCITS fund. It can be held by ISA's, SIPP's, Pensions, Charities, Family Offices, Endowments, as a direct holding or through a Private Wealth Manager. All classes have UK Reporting Status.*
