

JK Global Opportunities Fund

September 2017

The Fund rose +0.46% in September (GBP Class, Net of Fees).

The Fund rose 0.46% during the month, with equity markets pausing for breath after strong year to date performances. There were a few notable movers though, such as Macau gaming stocks; Chinese internet (Baidu) and education (TAL) plays; and US technology holding Micron technology. The Fund's short gilt positioning also added value. There was little activity in the Fund during the month, as we believe that the current period of consolidation is a precursor to a year-end rally in risk assets.

Economic data continues to hold up well, with Eurozone manufacturing PMI reaching new cycle highs. U.S. data remains robust, as does that in Asia, suggesting a reasonable outlook for earnings in spite of all the geopolitical issues the world seems to be facing at present. We would expect bond yields to rise gradually into year-end, as inflation firms up and a degree of 'tapering' begins, but do not expect this to derail the potential for further upside in equity markets. Relative to both bonds and credit, equity valuations remain undemanding. Inflation remains subdued, and the expectation for permanently low interest rates is starting to drive a re-rating in equity markets that we believe will surprise and further confuse many market participants. Furthermore, sentiment remains bearish and this is only encouraging in our view. We have noted before the strength of the technology cycle that we are currently witnessing, and believe that there remains substantial upside in a number of technology related areas.

The main areas of concern are that we haven't witnessed a decent correction for a while; central banks will be reducing liquidity a bit; China is probably slowing somewhat; North Korea; and the fact that the Dollar has the potential to rally which can impact on risk assets. However, for us to become really concerned about the outlook we would need to have a significantly more hawkish view on inflation and central bank policy than we do at present.

We are becoming somewhat more optimistic on Japanese equities, as this market is starting to look cheap again, and the period of Yen strength that we have seen might be nearing an end. Furthermore, Japanese companies are 'leaders' in a number of industries, such as robotics, that we are currently focused on, as well as benefiting more generally from a more robust global economy. Foreigner selling, and uncertainty relating to the upcoming election – which we expect to be a non-event – has created this opportunity.

We noted above that rising bond yields are unlikely to de-rail further equity upside, and would note that the S&P500 has posted solid gains (since 2009) every time bond yields rebounded sharply, by 50 basis points or more in a month, with the exception of the Fed taper tantrum period of May 2013.

Given all of the above we continue to believe it is right to remain long risk, short bonds; neutral on the US Dollar; long Asian equities; and in particular long technology counters.

Risk Factors: Past performance may not be repeated and should not be seen as a guide to future performance. The value of investments and the income from them may go down as well as up, and investors may not get back the amount originally invested. Exchange rates may cause the value of overseas investments and the income arising from them to rise or fall. The levels and bases of and reliefs from taxation may change. Investors should consult their own tax adviser in order to understand any applicable tax consequences. This list of risk factors is not complete and reference should be made to the documentation relating to the specific investment. An investment should only be made after receiving and reviewing the prospectus or offering memorandum and the risk factors contained therein.

No Warranty: The information, opinions, estimates and content in this document are provided without any representations or warranties of any kind (including, without limitation, representations or warranties as to their accuracy, reliability or completeness), whether express or implied.

Limitation of Liability: JKIM does not accept any liability for any direct, indirect, special or consequential loss or damage (in each case, including but not limited to: business interruption, loss of profits, loss of revenue, loss of anticipated savings and/or loss of good will), arising from, or in connection with the use of information contained in this document; or any decisions you make based on the information, opinions, estimates and content made available to you in this document whether or not such loss is reasonable foreseeable as at the date you read this document or JKIM has been advised of the possibility of you incurring such loss or damage, and whether occasioned by the negligence of JKIM or its employees, agent or subcontractors. This is not intended to exclude or restrict any duty or liability that JKIM has to its customers under the "regulatory system" in the United Kingdom (as defined in the FCA Handbook) or which may not be excluded or restricted as a matter of applicable law.
