

JK Global Opportunities Fund

January 2018

The Fund rose +6.32% in January, (GBP Class, Net of Fees).

Strong gains were seen in equity markets during the month, continuing on from the trends of 2017.

January saw strong inflows into equity funds, and it was becoming clear that sentiment was shifting towards a far more bullish mind-set. The move in the global equity market during January was reminiscent of the latter stages of a bull market, with widespread capitulation among previously cautious investors. Global bond markets started to accelerate downwards towards the end of the month and were the trigger for the sell-off we are now seeing. Fortunately, we have been reducing risk exposures in the Fund during the month, as well as adding to short positions in global bond markets. Cash levels have been built up which should enable the Fund to exploit opportunities as they arise in the current volatile environment.

Broadly speaking the sharp falls we have seen in bond and equity prices over the last week or so reflect upward revisions to expectations for inflation and US interest rates, rather than any concern that global growth is faltering. The January US employment report seemed to provide a tipping point for bond markets, which have sold-off fairly aggressively, with the predictable knock-on impact to global equities. Whilst we do not expect these moves in financial markets to have much effect on global growth, they are a reminder that financial market conditions are likely to get more volatile from here. The risk is that we see a meaningful rise in inflationary pressures which in turn forces central banks to be far more aggressive in their tightening, thereby accelerating the sell-off we are witnessing in the long-end of bond markets. This is not our base case, but remains a real possibility. Furthermore, whilst real yields have moved higher, there is plenty of scope for them to rise further should sentiment deteriorate further.

As noted above we had been reducing risk exposures somewhat due to the overbought nature of many markets and the shift to a more bullish mind-set by the consensus. Our base case is that this correction will provide an opportunity to add to our equity exposures, as the earnings outlook remains good, and valuations have become reasonable once more. However, the bull market in risk assets is likely to become bumpier, particularly as global QE comes to an end, although the weaker Dollar provides support for global financial conditions.

Mifid2: Please note that under the new Mifid2 regulations, which came into force on 3rd January 2018, we are required to “unbundle” the costs of broker equity research and dealing costs. We will be operating a Research Payment Account on behalf of the Fund and the costs of research to the Fund are unlikely to change from those of previous years.

JK Global Opportunities Fund is a weekly dealing UCITS fund. It can be held by ISA's, SIPP's, Pensions, Charities, Family Offices, Endowments, as a direct holding or through a Private Wealth Manager. All classes have UK Reporting Status.
