

JK Global Opportunities Fund

January 2019

USD Class +3.17%, GBP Class +2.98%, YEN Class +2.95%, EUR Class +2.90% in January.

The Fund rose +3.17% during the month as risk assets rallied from sharply oversold levels after a tumultuous end to 2018. Equities and high yield were standout performers, with the U.S. in particular recouping most of December's losses, no doubt helped by the FED 'volte face'. We have mentioned before how FED policy is so important these days to financial assets, and this has proved to be the case yet again. However, this time we believe the relief will prove temporary, as we expect the weight of the global economic slowdown and earnings downgrades to provide a strong headwind to any further gains.

As a result of our somewhat conservative near term view, we are keeping market exposures and risk levels low. Having said this, there are pockets of value out there, and we are keen to take advantage of these by building positions now. One such example is Japan, where the equity market has become very cheap, where sentiment is very bearish, and where foreigners have been large sellers. All of these factors suggest to us that now is a low risk entry point for this asset class. We have constructed a 25 stock portfolio of companies that have exceptional value characteristics – in aggregate the portfolio has a trailing price to earnings multiple of x8, a 10% return on equity, and a 4% dividend yield. As ever, patience will likely prove key, but potential upside is significant. We also believe that having some YEN exposure is no bad thing in these volatile times.

Another contrarian view we have is on China. Whilst the focus has been on the geopolitics of late, we need to keep in the back of our minds the manner in which China plans to reshape its economy through 2025 (maybe 2030 now is more realistic!). China aspires to reshape its economy by bringing about the fourth industrial revolution whilst securing China's dominance in global technology and increasing its geopolitical and economic influence via the Belt and Road initiative. China seems well placed to attain leadership roles in technology, telecoms, electric vehicles, clean energy (wind/solar), internet, AI, and cyber. This will create significant investment opportunities.

Whilst its adjustment from the growth drivers of exports and investment, combined with debt levels that are arguably too high, will not prove smooth sailing, we are reluctant to write the place off given its proven ability to adapt and change, as evidenced by the extraordinary economic performance since the early 1980's. Critically, a smooth transition requires a shift in the composition of growth towards consumption, while a restructuring of the state owned sector is necessary to achieve the necessary productivity gains as its demographics shift and it moves from being a current account surplus to a current account deficit country. Such a shift is achievable (we believe) over time.

The equity market in China is cheap, and sentiment is very poor. Government initiatives that are market friendly have started, and are settling things down. We are adding to positions.

We remain bearish on the outlook for Europe, and we remain short. Since the 2008 crisis the ECB's balance sheet has expanded fourfold and is now 30% bigger than that of the FED despite the Eurozone economy being 25% smaller than that of the US. Yet nominal Eurozone interest rates are still minus 0.4%. Furthermore, Eurozone QE is still on-going as the ECB bought EUR3.3bn of Italian debt in January, and EUR2.5bn of French securities. Across the Eurozone, bank share prices are 80% below their 2008 peak. We await the merger of Deutsche Bank and Commerzbank to form a 'national champion' – even the usual smooth talking investment banker is going to struggle to put a positive spin on this one. It's akin to suggesting a merger of Debenhams and House of Fraser would create a UK retail powerhouse! In a minute, if it hasn't already, reality is going to start to bite, whether one looks at Italy, France or Germany. Growth in all cases is starting to slow alarmingly and the policy toolbox is looking rather bare. This will prove catastrophic for the single currency and European banking systems once again when the global downturn really starts in earnest. Caveat emptor.

JK Global Opportunities Fund is a weekly dealing UCITS fund. It can be held by ISA's, SIPP's, Pensions, Charities, Family Offices, Endowments, as a direct holding or through a Private Wealth Manager. All classes have UK Reporting Status.
