

JK Global Opportunities Fund

November 2017

The Fund rose +2.54% in November (GBP Class, Net of Fees).

Gains were driven by the Fund's equity holdings with strong performances from the likes of Hutchinson China MediTech, Blue Prism Group, Tokyo Electron, Ping An Insurance, and the Fund's long position in the Nikkei 225 index.

The world economy has continued to experience fairly rapid growth. Manufacturing output and global trade have picked up, and the latest business surveys and measures of consumer confidence have remained strong. The economic expansion is broad-based, with advanced economies all benefitting and most emerging economies gaining momentum. At the same time, there is little evidence of a pick-up in inflation.

Central bank tightening is still in the early stages, with US real policy rates negative. Historically, downturns have not started with real rates below 2%. Furthermore, any pick-up in inflation would reduce real rates further. We also need to bear in mind that stocks have not peaked historically with a positively sloped yield curve – it needs to be inverted. It has not paid to position ahead of the curve actually inverting. In fact, stocks tended to perform well during the period whilst the FED was hiking. Thus, it is no surprise that financial markets have generally taken the Fed's plans to unwind QE and the ECB's plan to taper their asset purchases in their stride.

In our view the global economic momentum should remain supportive for earnings which we expect to grow in the high single digit range in 2018. Recent tax changes in the US provide a further stimulus to growth.

Whilst equity multiples do not look cheap in absolute terms, they look very cheap relative to both bonds and credit. The long-ends of developed country bond markets look risky, in an environment of good economic growth and signs (albeit small) of wage growth picking-up. We will be looking to increase our bond short positions over the coming months as term premiums look too low to us. Furthermore, we have reduced risk exposures somewhat recently as we feel sentiment has shifted towards a more bullish mind-set. 2017 has been a very good year for those willing to assume a degree of risk, and we expect a similar outturn, albeit with lower nominal returns, in 2018. However, we should caution that we expect the general investing environment to be more volatile.

JK Global Opportunities Fund is a weekly dealing UCITS fund. It can be held by ISA's, SIPP's, Pensions, Charities, Family Offices, Endowments, as a direct holding or through a Private Wealth Manager. All classes have Reporting Status
