

JK Global Opportunities Fund

November 2020

USD Class +6.40%, GBP Class +6.39%, YEN Class +6.34%, EUR Class +6.36% in November.

The Fund rose +6.40% (USD Class, net of fees) in November, alongside a record-breaking rally in global equity markets. Performance was driven by broad-based gains across our equity book, particularly in the NE Asia region (Japan, Korea, Taiwan), where we saw strong returns from stocks like Samsung and UMC. A small long position in Bitcoin also contributed meaningfully. China internet names such as Tencent, Alibaba and Meituan subtracted from performance slightly, as authorities introduced draft legislation to crack-down on anti-trust concerns. We have reduced exposure here whilst we re-assess the longer-term implications of this legislation.

Markets had their best month on record last month, as the passing of the US election and positive vaccine developments removed two uncertainties that had been weighing on sentiment, providing the green light for investors to unleash some pent-up demand. The market's current interpretation of the election outcome is a Biden presidency with split Congress, ushering in a less erratic style of diplomacy without the more radical left elements of the Democrats' agenda being implemented; a win-win for markets. News that Pfizer, Moderna and Astrazeneca all achieved impressive efficacy rates in their vaccine trials, provided further impetus to the rally last month and led to a rotation into more cyclical sectors.

It feels as if markets are now in a 'show-me' phase surrounding vaccine deployment and reopening timelines before that rotation can gain further traction, as it appears lockdowns will remain in one form or another until we see mass distributions, which may not come until Q2 next year. In light of this, we don't feel the need to chase this value rally - which looks stretched near-term - although we have been buying some S&P futures and shorting government bonds to lean into it slightly.

We have also purchased numerous commodity companies such as BHP, Rio Tinto and Antofagasta, where we like the economics behind some of the metals they produce. In particular, the supply/demand picture for copper looks extremely interesting, as it finds new applications in electric vehicles (EVs), while industry consolidation in recent years has led to a supply deficit. A depreciating dollar, which is a trend we expect to continue, will also provide a tailwind for commodity prices.

As mentioned earlier, a region that has been paying off for us recently is NE Asia, where stock markets are breaking-out to either all-time, or multi-decade highs. This is being driven by many structural growth drivers in the tech space such as 5G, AI, EVs etc., but also by the partitioning of supply chains as a result of US-China tensions and the Coronavirus. As the US and China continue to decouple from one another, trade is being re-routed to alternative suppliers in NE Asia who have a foot in both camps. There is also increasing evidence that companies are beginning to fragment supply chains around these two economies, as opposed to centring around one global manufacturing hub. For example, Apple has been instructing its Taiwanese suppliers to shift production out of China to serve the US market, whilst it encourages Luxshare to build out its domestic operations to serve the Chinese market. Coronavirus has likely exacerbated this trend, as companies re-assess the vulnerabilities in operating one globally-integrated supply chain. The construction of these new supply chains will clearly benefit many Japanese companies, who produce the world's most advanced robotics and factory automation equipment. In addition, the signing of the RCEP free-trade agreement last month (the largest in history), will bring significant economic benefits to this region, adding further reasons to be bullish here.

JK Global Opportunities Fund is a weekly dealing UCITS fund. It can be held by ISA's, SIPP's, Pensions, Charities, Family Offices, Endowments, as a direct holding or through a Private Wealth Manager. All classes have UK Reporting Status.*
